Not only that but handwriting is unique to each person, much like a fingerprint. While we all have crossovers, no two people's writing will be identical. For example, two people may form their y's similarly, but the letters will be a different size. Two other people may have writing of the exact same size, but one of them dots their i's to the left, and the other to the right. If a crime takes place where there's a piece of handwritten evidence available, it's possible to match it to a suspect through the process of handwriting analysis. Handwritten evidence could be a forged document, a letter, a random note, or anything else featuring handwritten words. For handwriting analysis, 12 characteristics are taken into consideration by the experts. I have outlined each of them below. The 12 characteristics of handwriting 1. Line quality Do the lines flow or are they shaky and irregular? This can indicate the speed of the writing. Prolonged writing can hint at someone copying the handwriting of another or trying to alter their own in some other way. 2. Word and letter spacing Are the letters and words equally spaced out, or are they bunched together? Or, is there seemingly no pattern to the spacing? 3. Size consistency Is the ratio of height to width consistent in each letter? 4. Pen lifts Does the writer lift the pen from the paper or is the writing continuous? Excessive pen lifts can hint at simulation — someone deliberately altering their natural handwriting or copying that of another. 5. Connecting strokes Are uppercase and lowercase letters connected and continuous? 6. Letters complete Are the letters fully formed, or are parts missing? 7. Cursive and printed letters Are the letters cursive, printed, or a combination of both? 8. Pen pressure Is the pen pressure equal for upward and downward strokes? When is the pressure applied? 9. Slant Do the letters slant to the left or the right, or does this vary? 10. Baseline habits Is the writing on the baseline of the paper, above the line, or below the line? 11. Flourishes and embellishments Are there any fancy curls, loops or anything else unusual in the writing? 12. Diacritic placement Where are the crosses on t's and dots on i's? Are the t's crossed? Is the cross on the t at the top, middle or bottom of the letter? Are the i's dotted? If so, are they dotted to the left, the centre, or the right of the i? It is worth noting that a person may form a letter differently depending on where it appears in a word. Analysts like to find an example of each in the writing they are viewing. Other things to be considered are spelling, phrasing and grammar. While investigating and comparing each of the above categories, the analysts also need to consider the following. Factors that can result in changes to a person's handwriting: Age Mood How much time they have to write The writing instrument used Drink and drugs Illness Trying to write differently The last one is fascinating, as analysis teams also know exactly how people may try to change their handwriting and can, therefore, consider that. There are several writing styles in which cursive writing is one of them. Learning cursive writing is important for kids because it is a form of handwriting that enables you to write words beautifully coiled together. While you learn it, you write some words joined which adds flow and speed to your writing, making it look elegant. You don't need a special occasion to use cursive writing, you can use it in everyday use. What is Cursive Writing? Learn Cursive Writing Alphabets Cursive writing comprises no to least pen/pencil lifting from the paper. It comprises 3 subcategories that are "looped", "italic" or "connected". When the various characters are written connected, then they are said to be "looped"; The term "Italic" shows no joints or links between alphabets j, q, g or y. The words here are slanted. And the last element of the cursive handwriting subcategory is "Connected" here alphabets are connected and require least to no pen lifting; the terms are curved here to speed up your handwriting. Calligraphy and Cursive writing came into existence much later on; In the 600s Romans were one of the first users to do their tally and write scriptures. However, we saw the rise of cursive writing after the fall of the Roman empire when monasteries rose, monks and priests used it to transcribe holy manuscripts; Though the style and form vary from time to time depending upon the geographical location. During the 8th century, an English monk made it mandatory to use cursive to transcribe scripts from classic roman characters. The monks named this form of writing as Carolingian Miniscule and were useful: decipherable, lowercase letters, words grouped, and punctuation. Also read English Story Writers FUN FACT: The constitution of the United States of America is also written in this writing style. The cursive writing form we write in today developed in 16th century Europe. People began enjoying connecting letters with curves, loops and ends and with time it became quite popular across different languages and available to the citizens of the region and nation. It became a part of the various education systems and step-by-step guide was introduced to teach cursive easily. Soon textbooks with special copper plates were printed where students could trace the preprinted letters with their writing tools, which was usually a quill pen. Later many variations were introduced to make it look more elegant and beautiful. New scripts and methods were introduced like Spencerian script, Palmer method, D'Nealian handwriting method and a few more. With technology and progress in society in all forms today, we have many alternative ways to learn and improve our cursive writing. Below are a few tools that can be used. The cursive writing book set.Dry erase workbook.The magnetic tablet (available in both uppercase and lowercase).Cursive doodle workbooks.Steps4kids cursive DVD.There are various apps on play store and apple store that can be downloaded which appear more appealing to kids these days.Blackboard and chalk.Fancy pens and pencils (to them they appear to be like toys, so they write and take part more). How to learn Cursive Writing? Start by mastering each uppercase and lowercase alphabet individually. Step-by-step letter formation followed by word and sentence formation will help to learn the art of cursive writing quicker. Take your time to practice whenever you can. The best way to learn and improve is to practice as much as you can; purchase a practice workbook or any of the tools mentioned above and work on it daily. Make use of practice cards and sheets to test yourself and increase engagement. How to write in cursive? Benefits of Learning Cursive Writing Cursive writing has many benefits to its use as it boosts your writing and reading skills. It enables you to have a greater knowledge of spellings and also fewer spelling errors are made. People who use cursive writing have a better knowledge of words and the connection between various alphabets of a word. Other than being able to form words easily it makes you an overall wonderful writer you know what letter will come next as it will tie to the previous one easily. You gain a better understanding of how words and alphabets need to be organised and combined to form the perfect sentence or simply a word. Cursive writers write faster than the people who use block letters. It doesn't require you to stop and change the slope or stroke after every alphabet. It gives the work a neat and presentable appearance. Cursive writing is so fun that you will enjoy writing instead of typing. You'll prefer writing them down; as a result, you will remember most of the information you jot down. It increases your information retention ability. Cursive writing can work as a teaching aid for people who have suffered certain brain injuries because studies suggest that their ability to write and understand print reduces but their ability to comprehend cursive remains. As a result, it can be helpful to people with learning impairment, dyslexia. Declaration of Independence and many other legal documents have been written in cursive so that people can easily read the most valuable documents of the country and expand their knowledge.
